

Marvin Taylor-Dormond

Marvin Taylor-Dormond is the Director of the Independent Evaluation Group at IFC (IEG-IFC). The independent evaluation function at IFC is part of the wider Independent Evaluation Group that reports directly to the World Bank Group Board of Executive Directors through Director-General, Evaluation.

Marvin joined IEG-IFC after a successful career in the Central American Bank of Economic Integration in Tegucigalpa, Honduras, where he held positions such as Controller (Independent Oversight and Evaluation Authority), Executive Vice President and most recently Chief Economist and Chief Evaluation. Marvin also served as Vice-Minister of Finance for the Republic of Costa Rica, his native country.

He holds a PhD in Economics from Carleton University and Ottawa University in Canada, an MA in International Affairs from the Norman Paterson School of International Affairs in Canada, and a Lic. and a BA in Economics from the University of Costa Rica.

Dan Crabtree

Dan Crabtree is an Evaluation Officer with the Independent Evaluation Group at IFC (IEG-IFC), and is lead author of the Independent Evaluation of IFC's Development Results (IEDR) 2008.

He joined IFC in 2005 and has since managed reports focusing on IFC's performance in Africa, IFC's Experiences in Middle Income Countries, as well as last year's IEDR.

Prior to joining IFC, Dan was a Manager with the Public Private Partnerships (PPP) unit of the UK National Audit Office. In this capacity, he led a variety of value for money evaluations, most notably those relating to the $30 billion PPP arrangements for the London Underground. He also ran the Secretariat of the International Organization of Supreme Audit Institutions' (INTOSAI) Working Group on the Audit of Privatization.

Dan has a Masters in Economics from the London School of Economics and a Masters in Political Science from the University of South Carolina. He is the author of 18 published reports.