

Luang Prabang

Lost in time is the ancient former royal capital of Luang Prabang, an enthralling city surrounded by mountains at the junction of the Mekong and its tributary, the Khan River. Luang Prabang has been a UNESCO World Heritage Site since 1995 to protect the town's 32 precious historic temples, the former Royal Palace and classic French colonial buildings from being destroyed by modernity or over-building. In the centre of the city, Mount Phousi is the ideal setting to see a fantastic view of the temples, rivers and surrounding hills.

Luang Prabang is small, and just about everywhere can be reached by foot, so practically any guesthouse or hotel in Luang Prabang is well located. The city has dozens of temples and religious sites, most of them in the old quarter. However there is more to the city than just glittering temples – the surrounds offer several spectacular waterfalls, trekking, kayaking, cycling and elephant riding.

While Luang Prabang and the surrounding area have plenty of attractions to keep you busy for 2 or 3 days, why not Stay Another Day and experience even more...
