Southeast Europe
Corporate Governance of Banks

High Level Policy Meeting

London - June 16, 2011
Venue: EBRD Boardroom

DRAFT AGENDA

Organized with the support of Background

Banks in Southeast European countries (SEE) were affected by the global financial crisis much like their international brethren. But, the way that the crisis played out in SEE was markedly different from how it played out in the rest of the world.

One of the differences between SEE and some more developed banking markets is the focus of SEE banks on traditional lending activities. This helped to attenuate the impact of securitization and financial instrumentation that were so problematic in more developed banking markets. Another difference is the very high level of foreign ownership of SEE banks. Strong foreign parents provided financial backing when needed, while the much smaller number of locally-owned banks felt the crisis more acutely.

While these factors helped attenuate the local effect of the crisis, the strong reliance of SEE economies on bank lending inevitably raised concerns regarding the health of the banking sector. Certainly, SEE weathered the crisis comparatively well. But, at the same time, the SEE banking sector suffered a decline in confidence, a reduction in foreign capital inflows, and a contraction in credit activity, all of which had a significant impact on the real economy. So, the moment is opportune to examine SEE banking practices and, in particular, the corporate governance issues that were found to have played a role in the global crisis.

It is in this spirit that the Global Corporate Governance Forum, the EBRD and the IFC launched a banking sector review and a policy dialogue to offer best practice recommendations in the form of a Policy Brief to help strengthen the banking sector in SEE. The Policy Brief is the fruit of discussions that occurred between 2009 and 2011 between Forum experts, and SEE banks and regulators. The main challenge in its development has been how to adapt the lessons learned from the financial crisis and the guidance provided by international organizations to the SEE context.

Some of the problems that were encountered raise fundamental questions such as: Is there a need for independence on the boards of closely-held banks? Can a sophisticated control environment be expected to function in small banks with limited human resources and financial capacity? What relevance do sophisticated risk models have? How can disclosure work when information users are poorly prepared to understand information? What is the impact of the overwhelming presence of foreign bank subsidiaries on the banking sector and the economy, and how are regulators supposed to respond?

This final meeting of the High Level Policy Group is intended to cast some light upon these and more challenging questions.
